

Abstract of the Disclosure

A mesh-device for surgical repair of a hernia which has embedded within it a tissue adhesive. The tissue adhesive is activated after the mesh-device has been placed in the patient's body, and it prevents the mesh-device from changing the position of its placement without the use of sutures, staples, or other securing apparatus.